

Can I connect to PWC?

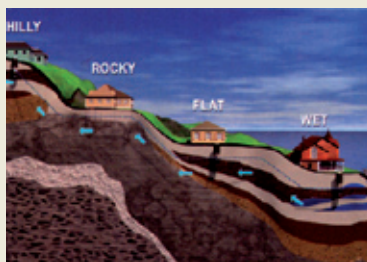

Only if it is in your area. Because we are introducing it to Rodney on an area by area basis, and only where it is appropriate, we suggest that you keep an eye on the PWC section of the council's website www.rodney.govt.nz. That will have frequently updated maps on it showing where the PWC networks are, or will be in the near future. Basically, most new residential suburbs will have the system. But there are also established areas where PWC will be introduced; local residents there will be advised personally and consulted when we are bringing in the system. If you are thinking of buying a section and building on it make sure you check with the Council first to find out whether it is in a PWC area.

Other good sources for PWC Information

Your best bet is our website. Not only does it have the maps, it also has a lot of other interesting information on PWC and how it works. You will also find links to the sites of the council's authorised installers. They have a wealth of additional information on their sites, and also call centres you can phone for answers to technical questions.

If you are not on the Intranet, you can call our Call Centre, toll-free, on 0800 426 5169 and ask to be sent information and a list of installers. Our Call Centre team can also inform you immediately whether you can connect with PWC or not.

PWC is the way of the future. It is not suitable for all areas and all homes. But it is a major step forward as the Council works toward making a positive difference in our district.

PWC means that wastewater can be collected even in areas that were previously difficult to service, e.g. hilly, rocky and unusually wet sites.

A hole is dug in which the grinder unit (comprising the storage tank and grinder pump) will sit.

The workmen lower the grinder unit into the hole.

Once the unit is installed and the grass has grown back, there is little evidence of its presence in your garden.
